Culture in Evolutionary Perspective

14-15th April 2007

Coach House, Green College,
Vancouver, Canada

---

In recent years, analysing culture within the framework of Darwinian evolutionary theory has emerged as a shared interest among anthropologists, psychologists and biologists. However, interaction between researchers in these disciplines has been relatively limited to date. With this in mind, the workshop will bring together evolutionary scientists working on culture in non-human animals with their counterparts who work on human cultural behaviour to discuss theoretical issues and analytical techniques.
